WHAT STARTS IN THE CLASSROOM CAN CHANGE THE COMMUNITY.

We help students turn their passion for psychology into action to make a meaningful impact on their community. Through rigorous academics, research, and clinical experiences enhanced by one-on-one mentorship, we help each student develop their professional identity and purpose.

WELCOME FROM SAN JOSE STATE UNIVERSITY

It is my great pleasure to welcome the 100th Annual Convention of the Western Psychological Association to the San Francisco Bay Area on behalf of San José State University! We are honored to serve as your host on this significant milestone, and I congratulate WPA on your first century of achievement and service dedicated to research and scholarship in the behavioral sciences.

As Silicon Valley's engine of innovation, technology and leadership, San José State is a natural host for this convention. We are proud of our amazingly diverse student population, comprising more than 33,000 individuals who reflect the opportunities, challenges and future of our region and of California, and our outstanding 4,500 faculty and staff members who support their intellectual discovery and personal growth.

Today's university students will work in groups all their professional lives, so they must be able to collaborate effectively with people from different backgrounds and working styles. They will need to be creative, resourceful and confident. Despite the breathtaking scope and speed of Silicon Valley technology that has radically changed the way we all live and work, we human beings with our unique talents, temperaments and tensions remain the beating heart of our communities, our workplaces and our families.

Thus it is fitting that WPA and SJSU are partners for this centennial convention, for your work to learn more about what makes us tick will continue to be essential for the coming century.

Your theme this year, “Connecting the Past with the Future,” is timely and appropriate as we must build on the wisdom and lessons from all our heritages as we confront sobering social, technological, political, economic and environmental disruptions.

I thank the Executive Board of Western Psychological Association for selecting San José State University as this year’s host. I especially want to recognize Dr. Clifton Oyamoto, chair of the SJSU Psychology Department, and Dr. Greg Feist, SJSU psychology professor, for their outstanding efforts to bring WPA and our university together again and for their contributions to this year’s program.

Finally, I encourage you to explore the entire Bay Area, including our home city of San José, while you’re here for the convention. We are complex region and a microcosm of the future of our state and our nation; you can sample the world right here in terms of people, food, culture and language.

Please enjoy a rewarding convention, and I wish you all the best on WPA’s second century.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Mary A. Papazian', with a long horizontal flourish extending to the right.

Mary A. Papazian, Ph.D. President

HOW WILL THE VIRTUAL CONFERENCE WORK?

An online program will be made available to all attendees in early October and you'll also be able to scroll through a list of the day's presentations from our virtual lobby. Our platform will allow you to select from sessions that are "live now," from all live sessions, as well as poster and paper sessions. While all content is available on-demand, we encourage attendees to be present when the recorded presentations go live as they'll be able to interact with the presenters synchronously using the chat function that is specific to each presentation.

Perhaps the best part of our virtual conference platform is that it provides for virtual networking and virtual convention badges. You'll be able to enter Zoom-like rooms to chat live through video with other attendees or use text-like chat to communicate with one another; there's no longer a need to leave a note on our bulletin board as in past conferences. Keep an eye open on our chat rooms as there will be many arranged by topic, interest, and the like.

We will also be hosting an exhibit hall as we do in-person and you'll be able to peruse all that our exhibitors have to offer. They'll be able to interact with you live through video chat and you'll be able to download materials from each booth. In addition, we will be offering daily prizes to those who visit the most exhibitors and interact the most with them; more details will be provided as the convention approaches.

STANLEY SUE

Dr. Stanley Sue is an emeritus Distinguished Professor of Psychology at both Palo Alto University and the University of California, Davis. He received his B.S. from the University of Oregon and Ph.D. from the University of California, Los Angeles. Dr. Sue has been recognized as one of the most prominent leaders in multicultural studies. His research on mental health service delivery to minority groups has resulted in systems changes in the areas of public policy and service delivery on national, state and local community levels. More recently, his work has focused on the critical examination of paradigms that psychology uses, and how these affect the study of ethnic minority and cultural diversity issues. As a result of his research, he has participated in a number of policy-oriented activities, including being an invitee to the White House Conference on Mental Health, and Science Editor for the U.S. Surgeon General's Report entitled "Mental health: Culture, Race, and Ethnicity." Dr. Sue has received a number of very prestigious awards, including Lifetime Achievement Awards from the Western Psychological Association and the Society for the Psychological Study of Culture, Ethnicity, and Race (American Psychological Association (APA) Division 45). APA Division 12 established "The Stanley Sue Award for Distinguished Contributions to Diversity in Clinical Psychology," to recognize a psychologist who has made remarkable contributions to the understanding of human diversity.

CHRISTOPHER J. KOCH

Dr. Koch has worked tirelessly on behalf of families and children. One of the things that Dr. Koch developed was a concussion assessment program (CAP), which he developed for middle school athletic programs and youth at no cost for those being tested. To do this, he established community partnerships with the Park and Recreation District, as well as with medical providers. The CAP provides free baseline and post-injury testing and educational materials to athletes and parents regarding prevention and treatment. He and his students have provided over 1500 assessments to students, many of whom were low income. Dr. Koch also developed a program called “The Zone.” The Zone provided STEM education during an after-school program for elementary school students. The goal of this program is to engage students in neuroscience. This program, like CAP, has been offered in low-income neighborhoods. Dr. Koch has also made significant contributions to the regional and national levels in teaching of psychology. He has been a staunch supporter of undergraduates in psychology. He served two terms as the Western Region Vice-president of Psi Chi. Later, as the National President of Psi Chi, he developed the Psi Chi statement on Diversity and developed the Albert Bandura Award for the outstanding graduate student. Dr. Koch’s contributions have been impressive. He has contributed to families and children, students and faculty at the university level, to WPA as the Western Regional Vice President, and nationally as the President of Psi Chi. It is with pleasure and pride that we honor him with the WPA Social Responsibility Award.

OUTSTANDING TEACHING AWARD

GEORGE SLAVICH

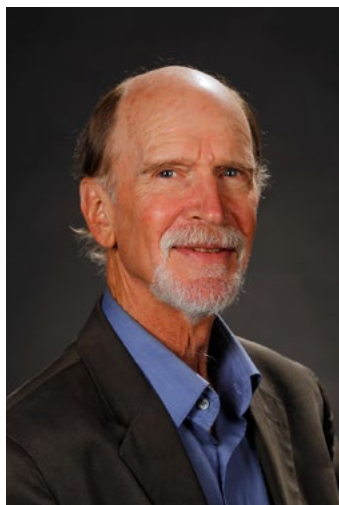

Dr. George Slavich is an Associate Professor of Psychiatry and Biobehavioral Sciences, a research scientist at the Cousins Center for Psychoneuroimmunology, and Director of the Laboratory for Stress Assessment and Research at UCLA. Dr. Slavich has mentored more than 175 students, many of whom have co-authored scientific papers and presentations with him. Early in his career, he founded the Stanford Undergraduate Psychology Conference, Society of Clinical Psychology's Section for Graduate Students and Early Career Psychologists, and our very own Western Psychological Association Student Council. Since 2001, he has received a total of 36 major awards, 11 of which have been for outstanding teaching and mentorship. These teaching awards include the McKeachie Graduate Student Teaching Excellence Award from the Society for the Teaching of Psychology and the highly coveted Raymond D. Fowler Award for Outstanding Contribution to the Professional Development of Graduate Students from the American Psychological Association. Dr. Slavich also recently received the Outstanding Undergraduate Student Teaching Award, Outstanding Graduate Student Teaching Award, and Outstanding Research Mentor Award from the Department of Psychiatry and Biobehavioral Sciences at UCLA.

ENRICO E. JONES AWARD FOR RESEARCH IN PSYCHOTHERAPY AND CLINICAL PSYCHOLOGY

TIFFANY M. ARTIME

Dr. Artime is an assistant professor at Pacific Lutheran University. Her research interest is in the area of traumatic stress. She is completing a two-year Patient Centered Outcomes Research Institute (PCORI) funded project collaboration between the University of Washington and Pacific Lutheran University. For this project, she has developed a stakeholder learning community composed of college clinicians, administrators, student life professionals, community members, and students who are investigating evidence-based, trauma-focused treatments for use in university counseling centers. As part of this work she hosted a training that helped to inform the adaptation of Skills Training in Affect and Interpersonal Regulation (STAIR) to the college counseling setting, and she is developing a manual that will be used by campus-based mental health professionals. She and her collaborators have created an “Integrated Continuum of Care” stepped-care model that universities can use to establish various levels of care across campus services for the mental health needs of trauma-exposed students. Besides teaching six classes a year and having a private practice, she engages students in her research, which is timely and bridges the gap between her scholarly interests and clinical training. It is with pleasure and pride that we honor her with the Enrico E. Jones Award for Research in Psychotherapy and Clinical Psychology.

LIFETIME ACHIEVEMENT AWARD ROBERT LEVINE

Dr. Robert "Bob" Levine is recognized for his contributions to the field of psychology, his students, and to the community. Bob passed on June 22, 2019, at age 73. He received a bachelor's degree in Psychology from the University of California, Berkeley, a master's degree in clinical psychology from Florida State University, and a doctoral degree in personality/social psychology from New York University. He was appointed to a tenure track position in the Department of Psychology at California State University, Fresno, in 1974 until he retired, and was awarded emeritus status, in 2008. Fresno State lowered its flag in his memory on July 2, 2019. Dr. Levine was an outstanding, well-loved teacher. In 2007, Bob received the WPA Outstanding Teaching Award, and he also received the California State University, Fresno, Provost's Excellence in Teaching Award. His research was creative and broadly applicable to a variety of fields. He published numerous articles and five books, including A Geography of Time, which was featured in Newsweek, the New York Times Magazine, CNN, NPR's All Things Considered, and elsewhere around the world. He was a Fellow in both WPA and the American Psychological Association. Dr. Levine was deeply devoted to the university. He served admirably as Chair of the Department of Psychology, and as Associate Dean for the College of Science and Mathematics. He also represented the Department of Psychology well in the community, serving on numerous boards, most notably for the Poverello House. Bob served as a role model for friends and family around the world, living a rich life as an exemplary university professor and involved community member. He infused the Psychology Department with a spirit of kindness, openness, and curiosity. His office door, decorated with amusing cartoons and community-advocacy stickers, was always open, inviting visits from students and faculty alike. A profound instructor, teaching us by example how to live life deeply and with curious eyes, Bob's influence will reverberate for many years.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARD

SHARI YOUNG KUCHENBECKER

Dr. Shari Young Kuchenbecker is the Associate Director and Co-Founder of the Western Positive Psychology Association (WPPA) at Claremont Graduate University, an organization dedicated to supporting student/faculty research within and between educational institutions, building the science of positive psychology. She received her bachelor's degree from Stanford University and Ph.D. in developmental psychology from UCLA. She began her research/teaching career at Chapman University, where she was awarded tenure at the age of twenty-nine.

Dr. Kuchenbecker first presented at Western Psychological Association (WPA) in 1974 and, over the years, she has coauthored many WPA poster and paper sessions with her students. In 2018, she served as the WPA Student Council Advisor. For the past 5 years, Dr. Kuchenbecker has volunteered at the WPA Annual Conference as the Event Photographer. She has captured our vibrant students and their proud faculty beaming at her camera. She loves being a part of WPA, and WPA is proud of her and her photographs!

REGISTRATION

The following table lists the convention registration fees. The professional members registration rate is available only for those who have paid their current year dues (the current year is July 1 to June 30). Prior members who have not paid their current dues are considered non-members. Membership renewals and new member applications will be accepted later in the summer of 2020. There is a single registration fee for all students. Student affiliate membership is included with registration.

CODE OF CONDUCT

The purpose of this WPA code of conduct is to promote a healthy, safe, and enjoyable educational experience for all WPA convention attendees, and to encourage attendees to maintain the highest standards of professionalism while attending the convention. If WPA staff, officers, or representatives from the convention venue, should feel there are violations of the code of conduct, appropriate action may be taken, such as removal from any event, or restrictions on attending future conventions or activities.

You are expected to:

- Show dedication to the educational nature and program time lines laid out in the convention submission requirements and guidelines.
- Present the most contemporary literature and data appropriate to professional standards, and avoid all forms of plagiarism or misrepresentation of data.
- Approach topics and colleagues with respect for diversity in all its forms.
- Avoid disruptive, inappropriate, and harassing behavior both inside and outside all convention events (i.e., presentations, sessions, dances, other social events). This includes sexual harassment, such as unwelcome sexual flirtations or advances, and unwelcome comments or physical actions of a sexual nature.

A Legacy of Impact

Founded in 1969, the California School of Professional Psychology (CSPP), was one of the nation's first independent schools of professional psychology. Today, CSPP continues its commitment to preparing the next generation of mental health professionals and advocates. Our dedication to ensuring every community's access to quality mental health care extends from integrated care to inclusive family therapy, and our students and alumni begin making an impact in the communities they serve from the moment they set foot in our classrooms.

DISTINGUISHED SPEAKER

TOWARD AN ENVIRONMENTAL PSYCHOLOGY OF PLANETARY RECOVERY AND BIOSPHERIC SURVIVAL (WITHDRAWN)

Dan Stokols

Department of Psychological Science, School of Social Ecology, UCI

Thematic shifts in the theoretical and empirical concerns of environmental psychology are examined across two historical periods: the Great Acceleration of human progress during the second half of the 20th Century, and the Anthropocene Epoch of human impact on the earth system during the early 21st Century. Research in environmental psychology spanning these two periods reflects a notable shift in emphasis from studies of proximal (local) settings and their effects on individuals' behavior and well-being to broader-gauged analyses of the psychological, behavioral, and health impacts of distal (remote) environments and world events. Examples of these conceptual and empirical shifts are noted within different sub-paradigms of the field such as ecological psychology, environmental cognition, spatial behavior, and environmental stress research. Emerging opportunities for theory development in the context of the Anthropocene phase of earth history are considered, including: (1) supplementing current efforts to promote sustainable behaviors and lifestyles among individuals with a greater focus on curtailing environmentally-destructive actions committed knowingly and intentionally by influential leaders and elected officials; (2) identifying opportunities for promoting ecological sustainability and societal cohesion across different environmental scales; and (3) broadening people's place identities and emotional attachments to encompass not only their local environments and social ties, but also their connections to the global environment and cultures different from their own.

Biography:

Daniel Stokols is Research Professor and Chancellor's Professor Emeritus at the University of California, Irvine. His research focuses on people's transactions with their social and physical environments, and how those affect personal and public health, social behavior, and ecological sustainability. Professor Stokols' scholarship spans the fields of social ecology, environmental psychology, the science of team science, and transdisciplinary public health. He served as Director of the Social Ecology Program in 1988-92 and as Founding Dean of the School of Social Ecology at UCI from 1992-98. His faculty appointment at UCI is in Psychological Science and Urban Planning and Public Policy in the School of Social Ecology. He also holds a courtesy appointment in Public Health in UCI's College of Health Sciences. Professor Stokols co-authored Behavior, Health, and Environmental Stress, edited Perspectives on Environment and Behavior, and co-edited the Handbook of Environmental Psychology, Environmental Simulation, and Promoting Human Wellness. His most recent book, Social Ecology in the Digital Age, was published by Academic Press in 2018. Stokols has served as a team science consultant to the National Cancer Institute, Division of Cancer Control and Population Sciences and the National Academies Keck Futures Initiative (NAKFI). He is co-author of the National Academy of Sciences report on Enhancing the Effectiveness of Team Science (2015).

TIME BOMB: HOW THE WESTERN CONCEPTION OF INTELLIGENCE IS TAKING DOWN HUMANITY

Robert J. Sternberg

Cornell University

The Western conception of intelligence is taking down humanity and other species as well. It is estimated that over 1 million species are already extinct or on the way toward extinction and we may be next. Historically, intelligence has been defined as the “ability to adapt to the environment.” Humans, instead, are rapaciously and often gleefully destroying the environment. Meanwhile, massive wildfires, hurricanes, droughts, pollution, epidemics, and other disasters exacerbated by human behavior are causing devastation worldwide. Ironically, IQs—supposed measures of intelligence—rose two standard deviations during the 20th century, while people devastated the very environments upon which their own lives—and those of future generations—depend. I propose an alternative conception of adaptive intelligence, containing elements of creative, analytical, practical, and wise thinking used to adapt to rather than destroy the conditions that make our existence possible.

Biography:

Robert J. Sternberg is Professor of Human Development at Cornell University and Honorary Professor of Psychology at the University of Heidelberg, Germany. His PhD is from Stanford and he has been awarded 13 honorary doctorates. He has won the Grawemeyer, William James, and James McKeen Cattell Awards. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the National Academy of Education. He is past-President of the American Psychological Association, Eastern Psychological Association, and Federation of Associations in the Brains and Behavioral Sciences.

CONDUCTING META-ANALYSIS IN JAMOVI (WITHDRAWN)

W. Kyle Hamilton

University of California, Merced

This workshop is aimed to provide a practical and non-technical guide to conducting a meta-analysis using the statistical software platform Jamovi. Topics covered include model selection, publication bias, detection of heterogeneity, common effect sizes and the generation of graphics and plots. Jamovi is free and open-source software that is uniquely suited to meeting the needs of researchers by providing them with both a spreadsheet-like interface for inputting study data as well as simple and intuitive menus for analyzing results. Further, this software improves transparency and reproducibility of the results by generating R code which allows for the results to be verified independently.

Biography:

W. Kyle Hamilton is a fifth-year psychological science Ph.D. student at the University of California, Merced. They are the author of MAJOR (Meta-Analysis JamOvi R) a software module for the Jamovi statistical platform. His research interests include childhood adversity, electronic cigarettes, emotion regulation, and meta-analysis

HEALTH AND HAPPINESS: LESSONS FROM AFFECTIVE SCIENCE

Stacey N. Doan

Claremont McKenna College and City of Hope National Medical Center

Central to human existence, emotions characterize all aspects of our lives. In this talk, Dr. Doan will discuss themes and lessons derived from the past several decades of research on emotion. In particular, she will highlight the important functions of both positive and negative emotions, how individual personality shapes emotional experiences, and the role of emotions in shaping trajectories of health and happiness.

Biography:

Dr. Doan, received her PhD from Cornell University. Her work focuses on examining the biological, social and individual correlates of physical health and psychological well being. She has been awarded early career awards by the Western Psychological Association, the American Psychological Association and the Society for Research on Child Development. Her research is funded by the National Institutes of Health and multiple foundations and has been published in the top developmental and health journals.

SEEING THROUGH CLOTHES: PREJUDICE, SEXISM, & IMPRESSION FORMATION

Regan A. R. Gurung

Oregon State University

Perceptions of people depend on what it is they are wearing. Job status, sociability, income, health and fitness can be perceived from clothing. People use categories when describing others and learn what types of clothing are associated with categories or labels. Different types of clothing send different messages. For example, men perceived women in revealing clothing as being more flirtatious, seductive, and promiscuous and less capable. African American men in sweatpants are viewed more negatively than when dressed formally. A model dressed in provocative clothing is viewed as more attractive and sexually appealing, but less intelligent and competent. Can we reduce sexism and prejudice by changing what people wear?

Biography:

Regan A. R. Gurung is Professor of Psychological Science at OSU where he has been since 2019 after 20 years at the University of Wisconsin, Green Bay.

A social psychologist by training, his research encompasses social, health, and pedagogical psychology. After an undergraduate education at Carleton College, he earned his PHD at the University of Washington in Seattle, and was a NIMH Postdoctoral Fellow at UCLA. He has published articles in a variety of scholarly journals including the American Psychologist, Psychological Review and Personality and Social Psychology Bulletin, and Teaching of Psychology, and is also the co-author/co-editor of 15 books. His textbook Health Psychology: Well-Being in a Diverse World is now in its 4th edition (SAGE). He recently published the Handbook of Health Psychology (2019, co-edited with Tracey Revenson) and is currently working on a Field Guide to Research Methods: Creating Savvy Consumers of Science (with Elizabeth Yost Hammer), and Studying Like a Champion: Applying Cognitive Science to Everyday Life (with John Dunlosky).

He is honored to have won numerous teaching awards such as the American Psychological Foundation's Charles L. Brewer Award for Distinguished Career in Teaching Psychology, The national Council for the Advancement and Support of Education's Wisconsin Professor of the Year, the University of Wisconsin System Regent's Teaching Award, and the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay Founder's Award for Excellence in Teaching as well as the Founder's Award for Scholarship. He is Fellow of the American Psychological Association, the Association for Psychological Science, and the Midwestern Psychological Association. A past President of the Society for the Teaching of Psychology (APA Division 2), he is President of Psi Chi, the International Honor Society in Psychology and is the founding Co-Editor of APA's journal Scholarship of Teaching and Learning in Psychology. He is currently Co-Chair of the APA General Psychology Initiative.

HOW PSYCHOLOGY CAN SOLVE OUR TOUGHEST TECHNOLOGY PROBLEMS

David Schuster
San José State University

Technology continues to evolve rapidly, with complex problems developing as past problems are solved. Cybersecurity, for example, affects the safety of everyone and has no simple solution. In this presentation, Dr. David Schuster will describe how human factors psychology can help solve complex problems, such as cybersecurity, by investigating how diverse forms of technology can help diverse people achieve their goals. Psychology is well-positioned, and needed, to address current and future questions involving human-technology interaction. Dr. Schuster will describe his interdisciplinary, applied research program addressing the human factors of complex environments. He will describe how psychology integrates perspectives to improve human-technology interaction as we look forward to a future of even greater human-machine interdependence.

Biography:

David Schuster is an Associate Professor of Psychology at San José State University. He earned a Ph.D. in Psychology from the University of Central Florida, specializing in Applied Experimental and Human Factors Psychology. Dr. Schuster's research centers on understanding individual and shared cognition in complex environments. He has conducted research in domains such as aviation, transportation security training, and human-robot interaction. Currently, he is interested in how complex sociotechnical systems support or hinder people, with a particular focus on decision making among cybersecurity professionals. In 2015, he was awarded an NSF CAREER grant to study human cognition in cyber defense. He has been awarded supplemental scholarships from NSF to fund undergraduate research training and has mentored over 50 students in his lab. Dr. Schuster has co-authored over 30 papers in journals, edited books, and conference proceedings. In 2017, he received the Early Career Investigator Award from the San José State Research Foundation.

DO WE NEED ANOTHER HERO? THE CASE FOR EDWARD CHACE TOLMAN

Kevin Lanning

Wilkes Honors College, Florida Atlantic University

Abstract:

Tolman was a gifted scholar whose rigor and insight into the minds of rats and men arguably rescued psychology from a sterile metaphysical behaviorism. His defense of civil liberties helped establish Berkeley as a center of academic freedom. His purposive psychology was characterized by the depth of careful measurement in the service of ambitious yet closely-argued theorizing. His work was broad, nourished by diverse strains of mid-century psychology, including functionalism, Gestalt Psychology, and behaviorism. Interpersonally, he was a disarming, self-effacing, and beloved figure. Counterfactual history is a guessing game. But if there is a parallel universe that mirrors our own sauf the life Tolman, it is one in which the shape and purpose of its contemporary psychological science, of its University of California, and of its Western Psychological Association are all sadly impoverished.

Biography:

Kevin Lanning is a professor at the Wilkes Honors College of Florida Atlantic University, where he teaches courses including personality and the history of psychology. He was a student in Berkeley's Tolman Hall.

INCREASING THE PROVISION OF SUPPORT TO PEOPLE WITH DEPRESSION: INFLUENCING HELP-SEEKING, REDUCING STIGMA, AND AVOIDING HARM

Jason T. Siegel
Claremont Graduate University

Creating persuasive messages to influence help-seeking among people with depression, as well as reducing the stigma associated with the illness, can be a daunting challenge. Although the right message can save lives, the wrong one can be harmful to the very population intended to be helped. For nearly a decade, I have been fortunate to work with dedicated students and colleagues who have joined me in this challenging but critical fight. Literature focused on self-distancing, attribution theory, positive emotions, the overheard communication technique, vested interest theory, psychological reactance theory, and attitude function matching have all been utilized. Through the application of these social psychological theories on persuasion, motivation, and emotion, we have had found success, struggled with failure, and hopefully made an impact. This presentation will describe this program of research from its inception to its current manifestation, and all the highs and lows in between. The talk will conclude with a discussion of a recently implemented campus-wide poster intervention designed to increase help-seeking while simultaneously decreasing stigma.

Biography:

Jason T. Siegel is a professor of social psychology, the director of the Depression and Persuasion Research Lab, and the co-director of the Institute for Health Psychology & Prevention Science at Claremont Graduate University. His research focuses on the social psychology of health behavior change. Dr. Siegel utilizes theories of persuasion, motivation, and emotion, with the goal of maximizing the success of health campaigns and interventions. His commitment to the application of social psychology theories to the domains of depression, organ donation, and substance abuse has resulted in multiple awards such as the Western Psychological Association Early Career Award (2014), the Claremont Graduate University Presidential Research Award (2018) and the Western Psychological Association Social Responsibility Award (2019). Siegel is currently the Principle Investigator on a $1.3 million grant from the Department of Health and Human Services and has received funding from organizations such as the Center for Disease Control and Prevention, the National Institutes on Drug Abuse, the Department of Labor, and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

PLANNING YOUR CAREER PATH IN PSYCHOLOGY

1Garth Fowler, PhD, 2Jessica Conroy

1Office of Graduate and Postgraduate Education & Training, American Psychological Association, 2Center for Workforce Studies, American Psychological Association

This presentation introduces students to the APA's Individual Development Plan (IDP) Resource, a free, online tool that helps you assess your professional interests, explore careers, match your skills and competencies to career options, and create a plan to be on your way! We will also show you how to use data and online resources by the APA's Center for Workforce Studies (CWS) to use during the IDP process to find the perfect jobs and careers for you!

Biographies:

Garth A. Fowler, PhD, is the Associate Executive Director for Education at the American Psychological Association. He manages the APA's Office of Graduate and Postgraduate Education and Training (GPET), and is responsible for programs, initiatives and resources that support psychology graduate education and training. The GPET office host seminars, workshops, and online tools to help individuals prepare for graduate school, succeed as a graduate student, and learn about career options and jobs after graduation. GPET also supports faculty and departments by creating guidelines for psychology education and training and serving as a resource regarding learning goals, training outcomes, and trends in policy and practices that impact graduate education and postdoctoral training. Garth has given over 100 presentations and workshops on topics such as career and professional development, using analytics to assess training programs outcomes and developing learning goals, and understanding the transition from trainee into the workforce. He served as an expert panelist for two National Academies of Science committees, the State of the Postdoctoral Experience, and the Committee on Research Universities. Garth joined the APA in 2012, after serving as a faculty member and the Assistant Chair in the Department of Neurobiology at Northwestern University. He was Program Director for the Department's MS program in Neurobiology. Prior to working at Northwestern University, he was the Outreach Program Manager for Science Careers at Science magazine. He has a BA in psychology from The College of Wooster and a PhD in behavioral neuroscience from the Psychology Department at the University of Washington. He completed his postdoc at the Salk Institute for Biological Sciences studying the neural foundations of decision making.

Jessica Conroy works as a data analyst for the APA's Center for Workforce Studies. She earned a B.A. in neurobiology from Cornell University and worked in several neurobiology research labs before coming to the APA, where she has focused more on analysis and the application of data science. She has worked with the APA Center for Workforce Studies for over two years, contributing to a broad range of research on the psychology workforce and education pipeline during that time. These contributions have taken the form of presentations, written reports and papers, and short fact sheets highlighting the departments findings. She is currently pursuing a Masters of Professional Science in Data Science at UMBC.

ETHNIC AND RACIAL MINORITY ISSUES: HOW ARE WE FARING?

Stanley Sue
Palo Alto University and University of California, Davis

Since the days of the civil rights movement more than half a century ago, psychology has grappled with a number of issues regarding ethnic and racial minority groups. These issues include cultural and racial bias in research and practice, lack of research on these groups, disparities in mental health, inequities in the delivery of services, and means of improving cultural competencies. This presentation is a critical review and commentary of the progress of these issues. Several points are raised: (1) appreciation of cultural influences has increased but it is not sufficient; (2) ethnic and cultural bias is embedded in psychological science; (3) ethnic, racial and cultural considerations improve the science of psychology; (4) political issues are involved in research and practice; (5) cultural competency in mental health works; (6) new issues are emerging as we attempt to solve ongoing problems; (7) the political climate in society has created a basic threat to psychology. The presentation is intended to stimulate questions and comments.

Biography:

Stanley Sue is Emeritus Distinguished Professor of Psychology at Palo Alto University and the University of California, Davis. From 1981-1996, he was a Professor of Psychology at UCLA and from 1971-1981, he was Assistant and Associate Professor of Psychology at the University of Washington. His research has been devoted to the study of the adjustment of, and delivery of mental health services to, culturally-diverse groups. Dr. Sue has received awards for his work, including the 2003 American Psychological Association's Distinguished Contributions to Applied Research Award, 2005 Lifetime Achievement Award from the California Psychological Association, 2011 Elizabeth Hurlock Beckman Award for Mentoring, and 2018 Lifetime Achievement Award from APA Division 45. He served as one of the science editors for the U.S. Surgeon General's Supplement "Mental Health: Culture, Race, and Ethnicity," and as 2010 President of the Western Psychological Association, and 2015 President of APA Division 45.

MEMORE: MEDIATION AND MODERATION IN REPEATED MEASURES DESIGNS

Amanda K. Montoya

UCLA

Though repeated-measures designs are very common in social psychology, how to conduct mediation and moderation analyses in these designs has been discussed very little. This workshop will cover mediation and moderation models where the independent variable of interest is a two-instance repeated-measures factor (e.g. having each participant respond to two different stimuli or respond before and after an intervention). The workshop will provide hands on experience with real datasets using MEMORE a freely available tool for SPSS and SAS. The mediation section of the workshop will cover estimation, inference, and interpretation of indirect effects, as well as recommendations for writing about and visualizing mediation analyses. The moderation section will focus on estimation, inference, and interpretation of interactions, probing interactions using simple-slopes analysis and Johnson-Neyman techniques, as well as how best to write about and visualize interactions.

Biography:

Dr. Amanda Montoya is an Assistant Professor at UCLA in the Department of Psychology - Quantitative Area. She received her PhD in Quantitative Psychology from The Ohio State University in 2018 working with Dr. Andrew Hayes. She completed her M.A. in Psychology and my M.S. in Statistics at Ohio State in 2016. Her research focuses on improving the ability of psychology researchers to answer their questions of interest using sound statistical methods and by developing easy-to-use tools to encourage researchers to use the most advanced methods available. Her research focuses on mediation, moderation, conditional process models, structural equation modeling, and meta-science.

WPA PRESIDENTS FROM ANTIQUITY TO THE PRESENT DAY: BIOGRAPHICAL, HISTORICAL, AND HISTORIOMETRIC MOMENTS

Dean Keith Simonton

University of California, Davis

The centennial of the Western Psychological Association is here celebrated by focusing on its presidents. This celebration specifically integrates three perspectives: individual biography, disciplinary history, and scientific historiometry. These perspectives all radiated from WPA's first president, Lewis M. Terman, and then somehow interconnected a large proportion of later presidents who either conducted historiometric research themselves or else served as subjects in such research, most often unknowingly. The celebration closes with a distinctive yet representative illustration of how WPA's presidential history connects with the presenter's own professional biography.

Biography:

Dean Keith Simonton is Distinguished Professor Emeritus of Psychology at the University of California, Davis. His more than 500 single-authored publications focus on various aspects of genius, creativity, and leadership. His honors include the William James Book Award, the George A. Miller Outstanding Article Award, the Theoretical Innovation Prize in Personality and Social Psychology, the Sir Francis Galton Award for Outstanding Contributions to the Study of Creativity, the Rudolf Arnheim Award for Outstanding Contributions to Psychology and the Arts, the Henry A. Murray Award for “distinguished contributions to the study of individual lives and whole persons,” the Joseph B. Gittler Award for “the most scholarly contribution to the philosophical foundation of psychological knowledge,” the E. Paul Torrance Award for Creativity, three Mensa Awards for Excellence in Research, and the Mensa Lifetime Achievement Award. His 14 books include the 2014 Wiley Handbook of Genius and the 2018 Genius Checklist.

Dr. Robert Levine

August 25, 1945 - June 22, 2019

It is with great sadness that the Fresno State Department of Psychology announces the passing of Bob Levine, PhD, a treasured and widely-admired colleague whose considerable academic achievements and irrepressible curiosity were matched only by his inexhaustible kindness and deep humility. Bob's commitment to improving the lives of those he came in contact with was unshakable, and his absence has been a palpable reminder of all he gave in service to the department, the university, and the local community.

Bob, a former President of WPA, was a perennial presence at the annual conventions. A passionate advocate for the involvement of students in psychological research, one could invariably count on finding Bob's warm smile making the rounds at student posters and talks, always listening with care and genuine interest for the thoughts of those with whom he spoke.

A Travel Research Scholarship Award has been established in Bob's name at Fresno State. Your donation will support this fund and greatly benefit Fresno State psychology students.

CREATIVITY AS THE DRIVE FOR MEANING MAKING

Gregory Feist (Research-Experimental Faculty)
San Jose State University

In this talk I will present a model of creative motivation as the search for meaning. The motivation behind creative thought and behavior, especially at high levels (Big C-Creativity), is not well understood. I will argue that one of the primary motives behind much creative activity is to make sense of our internal and external worlds. In general terms, artists are more likely to focus on understanding internal processes, whereas scientists are more focused on understanding the external world. Further, I situate this argument in the evolution of the human brain. One primary function of the brain is to organize and interpret sensory experience. Over long periods of time, this brain function is responsible for every component of human culture—our cuisines, our languages, our religions, our philosophies, our politics, our sciences, and our arts to name just the major ones. To put it most simply, our brains function to make meaning of what we sense, and in the process have created all human belief systems, cultures, ideologies, sciences, philosophies, and the arts. In support of this model, I will review current literature on creative motivation, with a focus on meaning, legacy, and symbolic immortality.

Biography:

Gregory J. Feist currently is Professor of Psychology in Personality Psychology at San Jose State University. He is widely published in the psychology of creativity and psychology of science. He received his PhD in 1991 from the University of California at Berkeley. He is author of The Psychology of Science: Origins of the Scientific Mind, awarded the William James Book Award by Division 1 of APA. He is also co-author of two textbooks: “Psychology: Perspectives and Connections” and “Theories of Personality” (McGraw-Hill).

REPRODUCIBLE PAPER WRITING WITH R MARKDOWN

Michael C. Frank

Stanford University

R Markdown is a simple but very powerful way to mix R data analysis code and text. R Markdown documents are a great way to document your data analysis and create reproducible reports (e.g., that automatically render your graphs and tables and even your results section from your data). You can even use R Markdown to write your entire paper, avoiding copy-and-pasting your analyses, which can be a major source of errors in papers. The rendered documents look spiffy on the web and in print. In this workshop, we introduce R Markdown and show how it can be used as part of a reproducible writing workflow.

Biography:

Michael C. Frank is David and Lucile Packard Professor of Human Biology at Stanford University and Director of the Symbolic Systems Program. He received his PhD from MIT in Brain and Cognitive Sciences in 2010. He studies language use and language learning, and how these interact with social cognition, focusing especially on early childhood. He is the founder of the ManyBabies Consortium, a collaborative replication network for infancy research, and has led open-data projects including Wordbank and MetaLab. He has received the Troland Award of the National Academy of Sciences (2020), the FABBS Early Career Impact Award (2017), the Jacobs Foundation Advanced Research Fellowship (2016), and the Glushko Dissertation Prize from the Cognitive Science Society (2010). He served as Chair of the Governing Board of the Cognitive Science Society (2019), was a founding Executive Committee member of the Society for the Improvement of Psychological Science, and has edited for journals including Cognition, Infant Behavior and Development, and the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

FAKE MEMORIES

Elizabeth Loftus
University of California, Irvine

For several decades, I have been manufacturing memories in unsuspecting minds. Sometimes these techniques change details of events that someone actually experienced. Other times, the techniques create entire memories of events that never happened: they create “rich false memories.” Collectively, this work shows people can be led to believe they did things that would have been rather implausible. They can be led to falsely believe they had experiences that would have been emotional or traumatic had they actually happened.

False memories, like true ones, also have consequences for people—affecting their later thoughts, intentions, and behaviors. Can we tell true memories from false ones? In several studies, I created false memories in the minds of people, compared them to true memories, and discovered that once planted, those false memories look very much like true memories: they have similar behavioral characteristics, emotionality, and neural signatures. Some of these findings bear on the current slurry of fake news, showing the extra susceptibility to false memories when they fit with a person’s current ideology. If false memories can be so readily planted in the mind, do we need to think about “regulating” this mind technology? And what do these pseudomemories say about the nature of memory itself?

Biography:

Elizabeth Loftus is Distinguished Professor at the University of California - Irvine. She holds faculty positions in the Department of Psychology & Social Behavior; the Department of Criminology, Law & Society, and the School of Law. She received her Ph.D. in Psychology from Stanford University. Since then, she has published 22 books and over 500 scientific articles. Loftus’s research has focused on the malleability of human memory. She has been recognized for her research with seven honorary doctorates and election to numerous prestigious societies, including the National Academy of Sciences. She has been awarded numerous prizes for her work, including the 2016 John Maddox Prize, which is awarded to individuals who promote sound science and evidence on a matter of public interest, facing difficulty or hostility in doing so. She is past president of the association for psychological Science, the Western Psychological Association (twice), and the American Psychology-Law Society.

G. STANLEY HALL LECTURE - NEUROPSYCHOLOGY: THE ORIGINS AND FUTURE OF PSYCHOLOGY

Antonio E. Puente

University of North Carolina Wilmington

Psychology's over 125-year history has focused on the making of our discipline a scientific enterprise. Whereas it could be argued that our questions are no original, there is no doubt that our methodology adds a unique approach that historically as not previously been present in addressing these age-old questions. In pursuing that goal, it can be argued that psychology has failed to acknowledge and relish our foundations dating back to the works of Wundt and James with its strong focus on the neuropsychological foundations of psychological processes. In the pursuit of psychology as a science, it can be further argued that we have confused behaviorism with behavioral (and as such, experimental) methodology. This confusion has had an indirect impact on restricting psychology to behavioral processes and interpretations. Not until the more recent ideas of neuropsychologists such as Sperry and cognitive psychologists such as Miller, has behaviorism as a psychological paradigm and as a restriction to a comprehensive understanding of psychology been questioned. As an alternative, the appreciation of both psychology's origins with its experimental procedures will not only remedy to century long restriction of psychological paradigms but provide a brighter and more robust horizon.

Biography:

Puente was born in Cuba and received his bachelor's degree from the University of Florida, and his master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Georgia. Puente was a clinical psychologist at a teaching psychiatric hospital and a professor of neuroanatomy at a medical school before becoming a professor of psychology at the University of North Carolina Wilmington (UNCW). He is also a visiting professor at the Universidad de Granada (Spain) and University of California, Los Angeles. Since 1982, he has maintained a private practice limited to clinical neuropsychology. In 2002, he founded and now co-directs (with a PharmD) a bilingual mental health clinic for the poor and uninsured in the southeastern region of North Carolina (Cape Fear Clinic, Wilmington, NC).

Puente has authored/edited eight books, 77 book chapters, 107 journal articles (in English, Spanish and Russian). His research focus has largely been on the interface between culture and clinical neuropsychology. He founded and edited Neuropsychology Review, the Journal of Interprofessional Healthcare and a book series in clinical neuropsychology (33 books). He has lectured in over a dozen countries and supervised fellows or visiting scientists from Mexico, Russia, South Africa and Spain. He has taught over 8,000 undergraduate students, supervised 33 graduate students and 10 post-doctoral fellows.

Puente is past president of the North Carolina Psychological Association, North Carolina Psychological Foundation, National Academy of Neuropsychology, Society for Clinical Neuropsychology (Div. 40) and Hispanic Neuropsychological Society. He has also served two terms as APA council representative for Div. 40. Puente is a member of APA Divisions 18, 19, 22, 26, 38 and 47, and a fellow of Divisions 1, 2, 6, 31, 40, 45, 52 and 55. Puente was also a member of the “kitchen cabinet” in 1999 under APA President Richard Suinn, PhD. Other leadership positions include chair of the Psychology Academy of the National Academies of Practice and several APA boards and committees, including the Board of Convention Affairs, the Committee for Psychological Tests and Assessments and the Policy and Planning Board. Puente also served on the Joint Committee for Standards for Educational and Psychological Testing. Between 1993 and 2008, he was APA’s representative to the American Medical Association’s Current Procedural Terminology (CPT) panel and was then elected to the Editorial Panel of the CPT panel (voting member). He was also on the Center for Medicare and Medicaid’s Medicare Coverage Advisory Committee.

He has received several awards, including: Fulbright Scholar Award 1983 (Argentina); UNCW’s Distinguished Faculty Scholarship Award 2009; North Carolina Psychological Association’s Lifetime Achievement Award 2008; and APA’s Karl Heiser Award 1996; Presidential Award 2006; State Leadership Award 2009; and Distinguished Professional Contributions to Independent Practice 2011.

LEARNING WHAT TO LEARN ACROSS THE LIFESPAN

Rachel Wu

University of California, Riverside

One of the most difficult and important problems that all learners face across the lifespan is learning what to learn. Understanding what to learn is difficult when both relevant and irrelevant information compete for attention, as well as when many things are relevant at the same time. In these situations, the learner can rely on cues in the environment, as well as prior knowledge to determine what is most relevant to learn. I will present a new theoretical approach that highlights four ways of learning what to learn from infancy to older adulthood, ranging from object learning to real-world skill learning. Research on this topic provides a better understanding of how we can encourage cognitive development through older adulthood, not just during infancy to young adulthood.

Biography:

Dr. Rachel Wu is an Assistant Professor of Psychology at University of California, Riverside. She completed her Ph.D. in Psychology at Birkbeck, University of London (2011). Dr. Wu has received a Rising Star award from the Association for Psychological Science and an NSF CAREER award grant to investigate the role of learning new skills on cognitive and functional growth in older adulthood. She was in a rock band as a violinist for 7 years (2003-2010) and also is a professional painter. Every few years, she learns to master new skills to gain a better understanding of the difficulties in being an adult learner.

WHY DO MENTAL HEALTH DISPARITIES PERSIST? THE PERSONAL RELEVANCE OF PSYCHOTHERAPY

Gordon C. Nagayama Hall
University of Oregon

One of the most persistent health disparities is the underutilization of mental health services by people of color. The advent of evidence-based treatments (EBTs) has not impacted these utilization disparities. Culturally-adapted treatments (CATs) have similarly failed to impact these disparities. EBTs may be limited by their assumption that single approaches are universally applicable. CATs may also be limited by their overly broad application to all individuals within cultural groups. However, clients may want treatments that address their individual needs. For many clients of color, neither EBTs nor CATs address their individual needs. I propose the Personal Relevance of Psychotherapy model that incorporates social neuroscience to determine the personal relevance of a treatment. Identifying personally-relevant interventions has the potential to reduce mental health disparities by increasing engagement with mental health services for diverse groups.

Biography:

Gordon C. Nagayama Hall is a Professor of Psychology in the clinical psychology program at the University of Oregon. He previously was a Professor of Psychology at Penn State University and Kent State University. Dr. Hall served as President of the American Psychological Association (APA) Society for the Psychological Study of Ethnic Minority Issues (Division 45) and as President of the Asian American Psychological Association. He was Editor of the journal Cultural Diversity and Ethnic Minority Psychology. Dr. Hall's honors include the Stanley Sue Award for Distinguished Contributions to Diversity from the APA Division of Clinical Psychology (Division 12) and the Distinguished Career Contributions to Research Award from APA Division 45 (Culture, Ethnicity, and Race). His research interests are in culture and mental health with a particular interest in Asian Americans.

FINDING FIT: A STRATEGIC APPROACH TO GETTING INTO GRAD SCHOOL

Garth Fowler, PhD

Office of Graduate and Postgraduate Education & Training, American Psychological Association

This presentation helps prepare students to be strategic and thoughtful when applying to graduate training programs in psychology. We will describe the different degrees options available to applicants and provide advice on writing personal statements, requesting letters of recommendation, preparing for interviews and more!

Biography:

Garth A. Fowler, PhD, is the Associate Executive Director for Education at the American Psychological Association. He manages the APA's Office of Graduate and Postgraduate Education and Training (GPET), and is responsible for programs, initiatives and resources that support psychology graduate education and training. The GPET office host seminars, workshops, and online tools to help individuals prepare for graduate school, succeed as a graduate student, and learn about career options and jobs after graduation. GPET also supports faculty and departments by creating guidelines for psychology education and training and serving as a resource regarding learning goals, training outcomes, and trends in policy and practices that impact graduate education and postdoctoral training. Garth has given over 100 presentations and workshops on topics such as career and professional development, using analytics to assess training programs outcomes and developing learning goals, and understanding the transition from trainee into the workforce. He served as an expert panelist for two National Academies of Science committees, the State of the Postdoctoral Experience, and the Committee on Research Universities. Garth joined the APA in 2012, after serving as a faculty member and the Assistant Chair in the Department of Neurobiology at Northwestern University. He was Program Director for the Department's MS program in Neurobiology. Prior to working at Northwestern University, he was the Outreach Program Manager for Science Careers at Science magazine. He has a BA in psychology from The College of Wooster and a PhD in behavioral neuroscience from the Psychology Department at the University of Washington. He completed his postdoc at the Salk Institute for Biological Sciences studying the neural foundations of decision making.

STUDIES OF STIGMA: CONNECTING THE PAST WITH THE PRESENT AND LOOKING AHEAD TO FUTURE RESEARCH

Allison A. Vaughn

San Diego State University

Goffman (1963) described stigma in terms of “abominations of the body” and “blemishes of individual character.” Research on stigma has distinguished social stigma from self-stigma, personal stigma from associative or courtesy stigma, and stigma surrounding physical conditions from psychological conditions. In this talk I will review some of the past research on stigma and highlight some recent research coming out of my own lab. I will start with the replication and extension of a classic study and move through a series of associative stigma studies examining parents of children with a variety of health conditions and learning disorders. I will also explore the interpersonal nature of stigma in terms of symptom appraisal within a romantic relationship and the effects that has on relationship quality. Finally, I will look ahead to the research that still needs to be done through a lens of stigma reduction giving implications for health.

Biography:

Dr. Allison Vaughn is an associate professor of psychology and has affiliated appointments with Women’s Studies and LGBTQ+ Studies. Dr. Vaughn received her B.A. from Cal Poly Pomona, her M.A. from San Diego State University, and her Ph.D. from the University of Utah. She has been at SDSU since 2008, and has taught at the undergraduate, Masters, and doctoral levels. Dr. Vaughn has served as the faculty advisor for Psi Chi since 2012 and was awarded the (Western) Region Faculty Advisor Award. She was also recognized as the Outstanding Faculty Member in the Psychology Department as well as College of Sciences Outstanding Teaching Award in her tenure at SDSU. Finally, she received the Early Career Research Award from WPA in 2018. Dr. Vaughn is a social health psychologist interested in the intersection of social relationships, stigma, and health. She has looked specifically at how a variety of social relationships and the social support from those relationships influences cardiovascular health as well as mental health (e.g., depression, anxiety, life satisfaction). Her more recent work on stigma explores how stigmatization can influence health and well-being. Additionally, for those with health conditions, stigma may deter them from seeking services that could help their condition which adds another layer of complexity to a problematic situation. A primary goal of her work is to better understand the relationship between stigma, social relationships/support, and health so that she can design interventions to reduce stigma, enhance social support, and ultimately improve health.

APA DISTINGUISHED SCIENTIST LECTURE - BIGGER DATA ABOUT SMALLER PEOPLE: STUDYING LANGUAGE LEARNING AT SCALE

Michael C. Frank
Stanford University

Every typically developing child learns to talk, but children vary tremendously in how and when they do so. What predicts this variability? And which aspects of early language learning are consistent across the world's languages and cultures? We use data from tens of thousands of children learning dozens of different languages to create a data-driven picture of universals and variation in early language learning.

Biography:

Michael C. Frank is David and Lucile Packard Professor of Human Biology at Stanford University and Director of the Symbolic Systems Program. He received his PhD from MIT in Brain and Cognitive Sciences in 2010. He studies language use and language learning, and how these interact with social cognition, focusing especially on early childhood. He is the founder of the ManyBabies Consortium, a collaborative replication network for infancy research, and has led open-data projects including Wordbank and MetaLab. He has received the Troland Award of the National Academy of Sciences (2020), the FABBS Early Career Impact Award (2017), the Jacobs Foundation Advanced Research Fellowship (2016), and the Glushko Dissertation Prize from the Cognitive Science Society (2010). He served as Chair of the Governing Board of the Cognitive Science Society (2019), was a founding Executive Committee member of the Society for the Improvement of Psychological Science, and has edited for journals including Cognition, Infant Behavior and Development, and the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

CUTTING-EDGE BIOPSYCHOSOCIAL PERSPECTIVES ON STRESS, DEPRESSION, & HEALTH: HOW THE PAST AFFECTS THE FUTURE

CUTTING-EDGE BIOPSYCHOSOCIAL PERSPECTIVES ON STRESS, DEPRESSION, & HEALTH: HOW THE PAST AFFECTS THE FUTURE

George M. Slavich
University of California, Los Angeles

Major life stressors, especially those involving interpersonal loss and social rejection, are among the strongest risk factors for depression and poor health. In this talk, I will discuss how such stressors get “under the skin” to influence psychological, neural, molecular, and genomic processes that ultimately drive disease pathogenesis. Central to this multi-level formulation is the fact that the human brain and immune system are principally designed to keep the body biologically safe, which they do by continually monitoring and responding to social, physical, and microbial threats in the environment. Because situations involving social conflict, isolation, rejection, and exclusion historically increased risk for physical injury and infection, anticipatory neural-immune reactivity to social threat was likely highly conserved. This neurocognitive and immunologic ability for humans to symbolically represent and respond to potentially dangerous social situations is ultimately critical for survival. When sustained, however, this multi-level biological threat response can increase individuals’ risk for several inflammation-related disease conditions that dominate present-day morbidity and mortality, including depression, chronic pain, cardiovascular disease, and autoimmune and neurodegenerative disorders.

Biography:

George M. Slavich, Ph.D., is an Associate Professor of Psychiatry & Biobehavioral Sciences at UCLA, a Research Scientist at the Cousins Center for Psychoneuroimmunology, and Director of the UCLA Laboratory for Stress Assessment and Research. His research leverages the power of tools from psychology, neuroscience, immunology, genetics, and genomics to better understand how stress affects the brain and body to increase risk for mental and physical health problems, such as depression and cancer. He is particularly interested in the concepts of targeted rejection, social safety, human social genomics, and social signal transduction, which are all terms that he coined. Dr. Slavich is also deeply devoted to teaching and mentoring. In addition to having mentored 175 trainees, he founded the Stanford Undergraduate Psychology Conference, WPA Student Council, and Society for Clinical Psychology’s Section on Graduate Student and Early Career Psychologists. He also developed a new approach to classroom instruction with Phil Zimbardo, called transformational teaching. He has published more than 115 papers and has received 37 major awards for these contributions since 1996.

HARNESSING THE CURIOSITY GAP FOR BETTER STUDENT LEARNING— REDUX AND UPDATE

Laura Freberg

California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo

Harnessing the Curiosity Gap for Better Student Learning—Redux and Update For people who missed Laura Freberg's 2019 Presidential Address in Pasadena last year, it's back in a new and improved version, although she is not promising to speak while wearing "the dress" again. This presentation will explore curiosity as a powerful motive for learning. In his 1899 Talks to Teachers, William James wrote "Just so, in teaching, you must simply work your pupil into such a state of interest in what you are going to teach him that every other object of attention is banished from his mind; then reveal it to him so impressively that he will remember the occasion to his dying day; and finally fill him with devouring curiosity to know what the next steps in connection with the subject are." How can the psychological science of curiosity help us promote better student engagement and learning in the classroom? How can instructors meet James' lofty goals for us? Understanding the curiosity gap can help. Curiosity occurs when there is a gap in our understanding, but not just any gap. If we know either too little or too much about a subject, curiosity tends to be weak. If we know just a bit more than a little, curiosity flourishes. Using interactive audience response technology, we will explore how curiosity gaps feel and how they promote a desire to learn.

Biography:

Laura Freberg is a Professor of Psychology at California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo. Dr. Freberg received her bachelor's, master's, and Ph.D. from UCLA and conducted her dissertation research with Robert Rescorla of Yale University. With John Cacioppo of the University of Chicago, Freberg co-authors Discovering Psychology: The Science of Mind (3rd ed.) for Cengage. She authors Discovering Behavioral Neuroscience: An Introduction to Biological Psychology (4th ed.) for Cengage and is lead author on Research Methods (2017) for Top Hat. Freberg is the Psychology Consultant for the New York Times in Education program. She served as the 2018–2019 President of the Western Psychological Association. In her spare time, Dr. Freberg enjoys time with her husband of 47 years, her three daughters, and her grandson. She also enjoys her two Australian shepherds, two kitties, and two parakeets, and has been known to unwind playing one of the Legend of Zelda games.

H. I. P. Welcomes Participants to the Amazing WPA 2020 Convention!

Phil Zimbardo is the President of the Heroic Imagination Project, H.I.P., a San Francisco-based nonprofit foundation, created in 2010. Its mission is to equip ordinary people of all ages with the psychological knowledge, social skills, and personal strategies necessary to choose wise and effective actions of heroism during challenging moments in their lives.

To learn more, please join my colleagues and me during the Teaching Conference (Vivian McCann) as well as in several symposia (Allison Evans, Gerald Hanley, Merilee Hanley, Ellie Jacques, and others).

Cutting Edge Treatment

Our training programs follow the highest national standards and provide you with cutting edge, integrated training for the health care leaders of the future.

Trainees work on dedicated teams, including Adult, Child & Family, Behavioral Medicine and Addiction Medicine. Rotations may also be available in Chronic Pain, Intensive Outpatient Program, Eating Disorders and Emergency Department depending upon the training site.

EVALUATING THE EFFECTIVENESS OF EACH RESPONSE OPTION WITH THE NOMINAL RESPONSE MODEL

Kathleen Preston
California State University, Fullerton

An essential aspect of psychological research is the measurement of individuals on a construct of interest. Furthermore, accurate measurement of individuals is imperative when high-stakes decisions are being made. Therefore, much of psychological research involves the development, revision, and application of measurement instruments. While most of the focus is one the item content, there is little focus on the appropriateness of the response options with a 5-, 7-, or even 9-point Likert-type response format being arbitrarily chosen. Fortunately, the nominal response model (NRM), a much underutilized polytomous item response theory (IRT) model, has the unique ability to estimate within-item category functioning, allowing researchers the opportunity to empirically evaluate the appropriateness of each response option. This more thorough and interesting way to analyze the effectiveness of each response option is especially important during scale development, or when concerned about the psychometric properties of an established measure.

This session will focus on scale development and revision under an IRT framework. We will begin with a conceptual overview of polytomous IRT models focusing on the NRM. We will then cover how to specify the NRM for analysis using modern IRT software, discuss some technical decisions, and interpret and plot the resulting category parameters. Finally, we will examine the within-item category functioning through the application of the Wald test, make empirically-based modifications to the response options, and evaluate the psychometric properties of the resulting scale.

Biography:

Kathleen Preston is an Associate Professor in the Department of Psychology at California State University, Fullerton where she teaches several statistics courses included introductory, advanced, and multivariate statistics, as well as psychometrics, and structural equation modeling. She earned her Ph.D. in 2011 in quantitative psychology from UCLA. Her research interests are in utilizing Item Response Theory, specifically the nominal response model, to develop and refine psychological measurement tools. Dr. Preston is co-director of the Fullerton Longitudinal Study where she applies advanced statistical techniques to long-term longitudinal data. The current presentation marks her fourth statistical workshop presentation at WPA.

ENLISTING THE POWER OF YOUTH FOR CLIMATE CHANGE: ALBERT BANDURA Q&A WITH PHILIP ZIMBARDO

1Shari Young Kuchenbecker, 2Philip Zimbardo, 3Albert Bandura
1Western Positive Psychology Association (WPPA) & R. W. Research, Inc., 2Heroic

Imagination Project, 3Stanford University - Professor Emeritus

In his recent accepted submission to American Psychologist titled Enlisting the Power of Youth for Climate Change (2019), Albert Bandura analyzes the actions of highly resourceful youth creating successful environmental programs. Indeed, diverse youths' shared intuitive initiatives around the globe parallel the formal principles of social cognitive theory. With only one to two decades to make the many-needed environmental changes, social medias' unlimited reach provides the means for large-scale impact serving a dynamic youth-led environmental movement. We can positively contribute.

Global warming has been unaddressed for over a century within our academic communities and professional psychological associations. We are bringing two giants in the psychology field together to address the climate change crisis and its devastating effects to come. Psychologists' attention, research, education, and actions are needed.

Phil Zimbardo will serve as Master of Ceremonies.

Dr. Zimbardo will lead the Q & A, and Albert Bandura will join the conversation broadcasting from his home at Stanford University. Shari Young Kuchenbecker will join AI at his home.

Dr. Zimbardo will focus and guide the attendees' participation and message shared during this once in a lifetime event and will join together with Dr. Bandura to bring you their insights and encouragement toward empowering the youth movement supporting needed climate change initiatives that you individually and collectively can bring about in your communities, institutions, and beyond.

- 1980 APA Award for Distinguished Scientific Contributions for his instrumental research in self-regulated learning
- 1981 WPA President
- 1999 APA Thorndike Award for Distinguished Contribution of Psychology to Education
- 2003 WPA Lifetime Achievement Award
- 2003-2004 American Psychological Society (APS) James McKeen Cattell Award

The David Starr Jordan Professor Emeritus of Social Science in Psychology at Stanford University where he taught for over 57 years including the offspring of his former students, Albert Bandura was born in the small town of Mundare, Alberta, Canada. The youngest of six children and only son, he began seeking adventures beyond his immediate community and started his activist career right after high school working to protect the Yukon Alaska Highway from sinking. At the University of British Columbia, he discovered psychology by serendipity and finished in 3 years to move on to the University of Iowa where he completed his MA and Ph.D. degrees in three years as well. His innovative concept of reciprocal determinism dynamically included the mutual interaction between the agent and environment. AI completed his Post Doc internship at Wichita Guidance Center then accepted a teaching position at Stanford University in 1953. Influenced by the then Stanford Department Chair, Robert Sears, his first book written with his graduate student Richard Walters, Adolescent Aggression (1959), then came Social Learning through Imitation (1962), and Social Learning and Personality Development (1963) with seven more culminating in Self Efficacy: The Exercise of Control (1997) and Moral Disengagement: How People do Harm and Live with Themselves (2015). A 2002 survey ranked AI as the most eminent and frequently cited living psychologist today with Sigmund Freud, B.F. Skinner, and Jean Piaget topping the list. Nominated by American Psychological Association (APA), 2016, Barak Obama presented Albert Bandura the National Medal of Science, our nation's highest honor recognizing achievement and leadership advancing science for development of social cognitive theory with its many individual and social applications.

Recipient of twenty honorary degrees, author of over 400 Journal articles, chapters, and books Bandura has continued his integrated pursuit of providing the foundations for individual and collective changes required to create a better future.

Bandura recognized the importance of observational learning via social modeling and documented the processes governing this important mode of learning. He extended his guided mastery mode of treatment wide, using long running serial dramas in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. The plotlines model peoples' lives, impediments they face, and inform, enable and guide them to take steps to realize a better life. These enabling dramas are promoting national literacy, raising the status of women in societies in which they deserve the freedom and dignity, and are promoting environmental sustainability.

Presciently, Bandura focused on environmental sustainability illustrated in an article in the American Psychologist submitted almost a year ago titled Enlisting the Power of Youth for Climate Change (2020), before Greta Thunberg captured the media's attention.

Bandura explains, youth recognized that the adult generations have failed them destroying the ecological supports of life and undermining their future.

Columbia, and ultimately Stanford University. Recipient of many honorary doctorates, APA division, and other academic and professional awards, he received the American Psychological Foundation Gold Medal for Lifetime Achievement in the Science of Psychology.

Best known at Stanford for his teaching excellence, internationally Zimbardo perhaps most is recognized for his 1971 Stanford prison experiment demonstrating that situations are powerful and social context is a dynamic important determinant guiding our behaviors and adapting accordingly. Zimbardo's textbook, Psychology and Life across multi-language translations and his video series, Discovering Psychology featuring original footage of psychology's influential researchers both have been used around the world influencing generations of young aspiring students and researchers. Zimbardo's work on shyness, time perspective, prisons and inhumane treatment, dissonance, technology disrupting social skills development, particularly among young boys becoming men as well as 20 other books continue to guide us including The Time Paradox (2008) and The Lucifer Effect: Understanding How Good People Turn Evil (2012). Author of over 300 professional articles, chapters, and books, Zimbardo was an undergrad triple major – psychology, sociology, and anthropology. Dr. Zimbardo explains that his research and interests all contributed and inspired the creation of the Heroic Imagination Project (HIP), a nonprofit research and educational organization. Ten years into outreach programs and experiential workshops across the world, HIP has trained more than 35,000 individuals. Providing simple guidelines and engaging opportunities, HIP encourages us all to become more than bystanders by overcoming the “natural human tendency to watch and wait in moments of crisis.” HIP seventh and newest training program highlights Everyday Environmental Heroes, guiding youth toward pro-environment actions for the future - one small behavior at a time and becoming community leaders toward our shared future.
